

Helping Your Child With HOMEWORK

Completing homework assignments is good for your child. Time management, study skills, and reinforced learning are some of the benefits.

As a parent, it's important to provide a homework-friendly space for your child and that you monitor his or her assignments.

With planning and guidance, you can transform homework into a positive routine.

Other ways to help your child include these eight HOMEWORK tips:

Help your child make a plan, which should include regular hours and breaks.

Organize materials. Supply pens, paper and other items in the study area.

Make sure your child does his or her own homework. Provide help, not answers.

Establish a plan to ensure your child completes homework. Ask about assignments and tests. Give positive feedback.

Watch your child for signs of frustration or procrastination.

Offer to help your child organize projects into small chunks with deadlines. This will help your child budget time.

Remind your child to bring home the appropriate books to complete assignments.

Keep the study area quiet. Turn off the TV, music and cell phones.
